REALISTIC FICTION

The Unlucky Kite

An original story

1 Mia was unhappy. Her new kite had disappeared over the tall fence behind the library. She had misjudged the wind, and the string had slipped right out of her fingers.

2 “We can rebuild it,” said her brother Theo. “I'll reread the directions, and you can retie the tail.”

3 Mia shook her head. “It's not the same. That kite was a gift from Grandma. I disliked the old one, but I loved this one.”

4 Just then, a woman leaned over the fence. She held up a bright red kite with a crooked tail. “Is this yours?” she asked with a smile. “It landed in my tomato plants. Next time, I suggest you pretest the wind before you let out all that string!”

5 Mia's frown disappeared. This was not such an unlucky day after all.

11 Find two words with prefixes in “The Unlucky Kite.” Write each word and its meaning.

12 In paragraph 5, “Mia's frown disappeared” means her frown...

A got bigger
B went away
C came back
D was misjudged

REALISTIC FICTION

Mr. Hollis and the Hopeless Garden

An original story

1 Everyone on Pine Street agreed that the empty lot was hopeless. It was full of broken bottles, rusty cans, and weeds taller than a fourth grader.

2 Then Mr. Hollis, a retired gardener, moved in next door. Every morning he worked slowly and carefully, pulling weeds and filling bags with trash. His neighbors thought his effort was pointless.

3 By June, though, the darkness of the old lot had given way to bright sunflowers and rows of beans. Children who had once been fearless about climbing the fence now walked gently between the rows. Mr. Hollis let anyone pick vegetables, as long as they were thankful and left the plants unharmed.

4 "Nothing is hopeless," Mr. Hollis told a reporter, "if you are willing to get your hands dirty."

11 In paragraph 1, hopeless means...

A full of hope
B without hope
C hoping again
D a person who hopes

12 Mr. Hollis said, "Nothing is hopeless." What did he mean? Use a detail from the story.

Think Deeper

13 Write a sentence that uses both careful and careless to show the difference.

Exit Ticket

INFORMATIONAL TEXT

Messages Across the Miles

An original informational text

1 Long ago, sending a message far away was slow. A rider might transport a letter on horseback for weeks. Some kingdoms used tall towers with fires on top, so that a guard could see a visible signal from one hill to the next.

2 In the 1800s, the telegraph changed everything. Electric signals traveled along wires, and an operator wrote down the message in dots and dashes. A few years later, the telephone let people hear each other's voices across many miles.

3 Today, a video call lets a grandmother in Texas see and hear her grandson in Japan at the same moment. The audience for a single online video can include millions of people. The roots of these words come from Greek and Latin, but the inventions are as modern as the phone in your pocket.

9 In paragraph 1, a visible signal is one that can be...

A heard
B carried
C seen
D written

10 Explain how the telephone was different from the telegraph. Use the word roots to help.

Think Deeper

11 Invent a new word using two roots from the chart. Tell what it would mean.

Writing Connection

12 Write 3–4 sentences about how you like to send messages to family or friends. Use at least two words with roots, prefixes, or suffixes from this week. Underline them.

The Unbreakable Promise

An original story

1 Ava was careless with her library books. She had misplaced two of them, and the librarian, Mr. Chen, was displeased.

2 "I will repay you for them," Ava promised. "I'll use the money I earn walking dogs."

3 For three weeks, Ava walked dogs every afternoon, rain or shine. When she finally handed Mr. Chen the money, he smiled. "That was a thoughtful thing to do. Your promise was unbreakable."

1. careless means...

2. misplaced means...

3. displeased means...

4. repay means...

5. thoughtful means...

6. unbreakable means...

7. The root port in portable means...

A see

HISTORICAL FICTION

The Blacksmith's Apprentice

An original story

1 When Tom turned ten, his father sent him to be an apprentice, a young worker who learns a trade by helping a master. His master was Old Rowan, the village blacksmith.

2 The smithy was always hot. In the middle of the room stood the forge, a fireplace where metal is heated until it glows. Tom's first job was to pump the bellows. Each time he squeezed the leather bag, it pushed a gust of air into the fire, and the coals blazed orange.

3 Rowan held glowing iron on the anvil and pounded it with his hammer. Sparks flew like tiny stars. Unlike the soft, bendable iron that came out of the fire, the finished horseshoe was rigid after it cooled in a bucket of water.

4 At the end of the first week, Tom's arms ached and his face was smudged with soot. But when a knight's horse trotted away on shoes Tom had helped make, he felt as proud as a king.

7 In paragraph 3, what is an anvil?

A a hammer
B a heavy block where metal is pounded
C a bucket of water
D a horse

8 How did Tom feel at the end of the first week? Use a detail.

Two Brothers, Two Knights

An original story

1 Sir Gareth and Sir Gaheris were brothers, but they were as different as night and day. Gareth was boisterous. He laughed loudly, sang at dinner, and told jokes that echoed through the great hall. Gaheris, on the other hand, was quiet and thoughtful.

2 Gareth was also impulsive. He jumped into adventures without thinking. Gaheris was cautious; he studied every map and asked every question before he rode out.

3 Yet the brothers agreed on one thing: a knight must be gallant, or brave and polite, to everyone, from the queen to the poorest farmer.

7 Which words in paragraph 1 signal an antonym clue for boisterous?

A as different as night and day
B on the other hand
C told jokes
D the great hall

8 Which brother would you rather go on a quest with? Use two details from the passage.

The Falconer

An original story

1 Lady Elaine was the castle's falconer. Like a teacher for birds, she trained falcons to hunt and return to her glove.

2 Training a falcon took great patience. Elaine waited for hours, never hurrying, until the young bird trusted her.

3 Her best falcon, Swift, was docile with Elaine but wild with strangers. When anyone else came near, Swift screeched and flapped its wings.

4 One day Swift soared so high it was barely visible, just a speck in the clouds. Then it plummeted, dropping straight down like a stone, and landed gently on Elaine's glove.

1 What is a falconer? Which type of clue helps?

A a bird; example clue
B a person who trains falcons; definition clue
C a castle; antonym clue

2 What does patience mean? Which words helped?

3 Docile means...

A wild
B calm and gentle
C fast

4 What does plummeted mean? What clue helped?

5 “Elaine waited for the falcon to land.” Which meaning of land fits?

A the ground of a country
B come down to rest
C to get a job

Storm over the Moor

An original story

1 The sky over the moor turned as dark as an iron pot. Wind howled like a hungry wolf, and the tall grass bent low to the ground.

2 Sir Bedivere pulled his cloak tighter. His horse was a statue, refusing to take another step. Rain fell in silver sheets, stinging his face like a hundred tiny needles.

3 At last, a light appeared in the distance. The little cottage was a lighthouse in a sea of storm. Bedivere's heart, cold as a stone a moment before, warmed with hope.

7 Explain the simile “rain … stinging his face like a hundred tiny needles.”

8 How do Bedivere's feelings change at the end? Which comparison shows it?

PERSONAL NARRATIVE

Grandpa's Sayings

An original personal narrative

1 My grandpa has a saying for everything. When I complained about cleaning my room, he said, "Many hands make light work," and then he helped me fold my clothes.

2 When my sister was nervous about her piano recital, he told her to “break a leg.” She looked worried until Mom explained that it means “good luck.”

3 Last week, I wanted to quit soccer after we lost three games in a row. Grandpa put his hand on my shoulder. “Rome wasn't built in a day,” he said. “Keep practicing.”

4 I used to think his sayings were silly. Now, whenever I'm about to give up, I can almost hear him say, “Hang in there, kiddo.”

How a Castle Kept People Safe

An original informational text

1 During the Middle Ages, lords built castles to protect their land and people. Many castles were surrounded by a moat, a deep ditch often filled with water.

2 To enter, visitors crossed a drawbridge, a bridge that could be raised to block the gate. The tops of the thick walls had battlements, which were walls with gaps that let archers shoot while staying protected.

3 The strongest part of the castle was the keep, a tall tower where the lord's family lived. If enemies broke through the outer walls, everyone could retreat to the keep.

7 Compare a moat and a drawbridge. How were they alike? How were they different?

8 Explain why everyone retreated to the keep if enemies broke through.

The Squire's First Tournament

An original story

1 Will had been a squire, a knight's helper in training, for only one month when Sir Owen entered the great tournament. Will's job was to keep Sir Owen's armor polished and his horse ready. He was nervous; he didn't want to be careless and disappoint his master.

2 On the morning of the tournament, the field was a sea of colorful tents. Banners snapped in the wind like flags on a ship. Hundreds of people crowded the stands, cheering and waving.

3 Will checked every buckle twice. Then he noticed something terrible: a strap on Sir Owen's saddle was frayed, its threads worn and coming apart. If it broke during the joust, Sir Owen could fall.

4 Will didn't hesitate. He ran to the saddle maker's tent and returned with a new strap just as the trumpets sounded. His hands were shaking, but he replaced the strap quickly and carefully.

5 Sir Owen won his first match. Afterward, he clapped Will on the shoulder. “A knight is only as good as his squire,” he said. “Today, you were my hero.” Will's face glowed like the sunrise.

1 In paragraph 1, a squire is…

A a knight
B a knight's helper in training
C a horse

2 Which type of context clue helps you with squire?

A definition (after a comma)
B antonym
C example

3 What does frayed mean in paragraph 3? What clue helped?

4 In paragraph 1, careless means…

A full of care
B without care
C able to care

5 In paragraph 4, the word replaced has the prefix re-. It means…

A placed wrongly
B put a new one in place of the old
C placed before

6 In paragraph 4, hesitate means…

A to stop and wait before acting
B to run fast
C to shout

The Code of Chivalry

An original informational text

1 In the Middle Ages, knights were expected to follow a set of rules called the code of chivalry. The code told knights how to behave in battle and in everyday life.

2 First, a knight was supposed to be loyal. He promised to serve his lord and protect the people who lived on his lord's land. Breaking that promise was one of the worst things a knight could do.

3 Second, a knight was expected to be brave. He had to face danger instead of running away, even when he was afraid.

4 Third, a knight was supposed to show courtesy, or good manners. He was to be polite to everyone and to protect people who could not protect themselves, such as children and the poor.

5 Not every knight followed the code. Some were greedy or cruel. Still, the code of chivalry gave people an idea of what a good knight should be, and that idea lives on in stories such as the legends of King Arthur.

3 According to paragraph 2, what was one of the worst things a knight could do?

4 What did bravery mean for a knight? Quote the text.

5 Which sentence BEST supports the idea that the code still matters today?

A "Some were greedy or cruel."
B "That idea lives on in stories such as the legends of King Arthur."
C "First, a knight was supposed to be loyal."

A "Knights were expected to follow a set of rules."
B "He was to be polite to everyone."
C "Breaking that promise was one of the worst things."

4 Claim: Honeybees work together in winter. Strongest evidence:

A "Many insects die or sleep through the winter."
B "The bees take turns moving from the cold outside of the cluster to the warm center."
C "A strong hive may eat 50 pounds of honey."

5 Claim: Mira grows more confident during the recital. Strongest evidence:

A "Her fingers trembled."
B "By the last chord, Mira was smiling."
C "Mira sat on the edge of her chair."

Pigeons with a Job

An original informational text

1 For thousands of years, people have used homing pigeons to carry messages. A homing pigeon can find its way back to its home from hundreds of miles away.

2 During wars, pigeons carried notes when other ways of sending messages did not work. One famous pigeon, Cher Ami, delivered a message in 1918 that helped save almost 200 soldiers, even though she had been injured.

3 Scientists are still not completely sure how pigeons find their way. Some think the birds use the sun. Others think they can sense the earth's magnetic field, like a built-in compass.

1 What is a homing pigeon able to do? Quote the text.

2 Paraphrase what Cher Ami did.

3 Which detail BEST supports the idea that pigeons were important in wars?

A "Some think the birds use the sun."

Mira's Recital

An original story

1 Mira sat on the edge of her chair backstage, twisting the hem of her dress. Every few seconds she peeked through the curtain at the rows of people. Her stomach felt like it was full of butterflies.

2 When her name was called, she walked slowly to the piano. Her fingers trembled above the keys. She took a deep breath, closed her eyes for a moment, and began to play.

3 The first notes were shaky, but soon the music flowed. By the last chord, Mira was smiling. When the audience clapped, she bowed so low her braid almost touched the floor.

4 Backstage, her teacher hugged her. “I knew you could do it,” he said. Mira grinned. “Can I play two songs next year?”

3 How does Mira feel in paragraph 1? Give two clues.

4 How do Mira's feelings change from beginning to end? Use evidence.

Honeybees in Winter

An original informational text

1 Many insects die or sleep through the winter, but honeybees stay busy. When the weather turns cold, the bees gather in a tight ball inside their hive called a winter cluster.

2 Bees in the center of the cluster shiver their wing muscles without flapping their wings. This shivering makes heat. The bees take turns moving from the cold outside of the cluster to the warm center.

3 All winter, the bees eat honey they stored during the summer. A strong hive may eat 50 pounds of honey before spring. Beekeepers who take too much honey in the fall may find an empty hive when the flowers bloom again.

3 Paragraph 2 says the bees shiver to make heat. Why don't they flap their wings?

Why Leaves Change Color

An original informational text

1 Every fall, trees in many parts of the country turn red, orange, and gold. The colors are not new. Many of them were inside the leaves all along.

2 During spring and summer, leaves are full of a green chemical called chlorophyll. Chlorophyll helps the tree use sunlight to make food. There is so much of it that it hides the other colors.

3 When days get shorter and cooler, the tree stops making chlorophyll. As the green fades, yellow and orange colors that were hidden begin to show. Some trees, like maples, also make new red colors in the fall.

4 Finally, the leaves dry up and fall. The tree rests through the winter and grows new green leaves in the spring.

The Bridge at Millbrook

An original story

1 The old wooden bridge at Millbrook had stood for a hundred years. Every morning, farmers drove their wagons across it to sell vegetables in town, and children ran across it on their way to school.

2 One spring, after a week of heavy rain, the river rose higher than anyone could remember. Muddy water crashed against the bridge's legs. Ten-year-old Ada noticed that the middle of the bridge was sagging, and one of the wooden posts had cracked.

3 Ada knew the morning wagons would come soon. She ran to the mayor's house, but no one answered. Without wasting another minute, she dragged her family's old red blanket to the end of the bridge and tied it to the railing like a flag. Then she stood beside it, waving her arms.

4 When the first farmer arrived, he grumbled at being stopped. But when he saw the cracked post, his face went pale. Minutes later, with a loud groan, the middle of the bridge fell into the river.

5 The town built a new stone bridge that summer. On the first day it opened, the mayor tied a red ribbon across it. Instead of cutting it himself, he handed the scissors to Ada.

1 Why did people cross the bridge every morning?

A to fish
B to sell vegetables and go to school
C to see the mayor

2 What did Ada notice about the bridge? Quote the text.

3 Why did Ada tie the blanket to the railing? Make an inference and give a clue.

4 How did the farmer feel when he saw the cracked post? Clue?

5 What does “Without wasting another minute” show about Ada?

A She was lazy.

B She acted quickly in an emergency.

C She was confused.

Part B · Theme and summary (1 point each)

6 What is a theme of “The Bridge at Millbrook”?

7 Why did the mayor give Ada the scissors? What does this show?

8 Explain one cause-and-effect relationship in the story.

9 Which detail does NOT belong in a summary?

A Ada warned people about the bridge.

B The blanket was red.

C The bridge fell into the river.

Part C · Write (5 points)

10 Write a summary paragraph of “The Bridge at Millbrook” with a topic sentence, the key events in order, and a concluding sentence. Then add one sentence stating the theme.

ADVENTURE STORY

The Secret of Hollow Hill · Part 1

An original story in three parts

1 Nobody in the village of Thornbury went near Hollow Hill. The grown-ups said the hill was dangerous, though none of them could say exactly why. Children whispered that a dragon slept beneath it, or a giant, or the ghost of a wicked king.

2 Eleven-year-old Pip didn't believe in dragons. She believed in maps. Her grandfather had been the village mapmaker, and when he died, he left Pip his drawings, his compass, and a small brass key with no lock to fit it.

3 One rainy afternoon, Pip spread Grandfather's oldest map across the kitchen table. In the corner, in faded ink, she noticed something she had never seen before: a tiny drawing of a door on the side of Hollow Hill. Beneath it, Grandfather had written three words: For Pip. Courage.

4 Pip's heart beat faster. She ran her finger over the words again and again. Grandfather had known she would find this. But why hadn't he told her?

5 That night, she could hardly sleep. Each time she closed her eyes, she saw the little door. By morning, she had made up her mind. She packed bread, a candle, the compass, and the brass key, and she slipped out of the house before anyone else was awake.

6 Fog lay over the fields like a gray blanket. As Pip walked, the village roosters began to crow behind her. Ahead, Hollow Hill rose dark and silent. Her legs felt heavy, and twice she almost turned back. Then she remembered the words on the map. Courage. She kept walking.

3 Write the gist of each chunk: paragraphs 1–2, 3–4, 5–6.

4 Why does Pip almost turn back? What keeps her going?

Annotate Part 2

ADVENTURE STORY

The Secret of Hollow Hill · Part 2

An original story in three parts

1 Thorny bushes covered the side of the hill. Pip pushed through them, scratching her arms, until she found a gray stone almost hidden in the weeds. Carved into the stone was a keyhole.

2 Her hands shook as she pulled out the brass key. It slid in perfectly. With a loud click, the stone swung inward, and cool air rushed out of a dark tunnel.

3 Pip lit her candle. The tunnel walls were smooth and dry, and someone had painted arrows on them in white paint. She followed the arrows deeper and deeper, counting her steps the way Grandfather had taught her. Two hundred steps. Three hundred.

4 At last the tunnel opened into a round room. Pip gasped. The walls were covered with maps, hundreds of them, showing rivers, forests, roads, and towns, some she knew and some she had never heard of. In the middle of the room stood a wooden desk, and on the desk lay a letter with her name on it.

5 Dear Pip, the letter began. For fifty years, I have mapped every corner of this valley. I kept this room secret because I was afraid people would laugh at an old man who spent his life drawing. But you never laughed. You asked questions. Now this room is yours. Please don't let my work stay hidden in the dark.

6 Pip read the letter three times. Then she sat down at Grandfather's desk and cried, but they were not entirely sad tears.

3 Annotate Part 2 using the symbols. Then list one thing you underlined, one question, and one surprise.

4 Why did Grandfather keep the room secret? Quote the letter.

5 Why does Pip cry “not entirely sad tears”?

ADVENTURE STORY

The Secret of Hollow Hill · Part 3

An original story in three parts

1 When Pip returned to Thornbury, the whole village was searching for her. Her mother hugged her so hard she could barely breathe. Then, of course, came the scolding.

2 "Hollow Hill?" the mayor sputtered. "That hill is dangerous!"

3 "It isn't," Pip said quietly. "There's nothing dangerous inside. Only maps." And she told them everything.

4 At first, people didn't believe her. So the next day, Pip led a group of villagers through the thorny bushes and into the tunnel. When they saw the round room, no one said a word. Old Mrs. Barrow touched a map of her family's farm, drawn more carefully than any she had ever seen, and her eyes filled with tears.

5 That spring, the villagers carried Grandfather's maps down from Hollow Hill and hung them in the town hall. Travelers came from far away to see them. The mayor named the room the Mapmaker's Library and asked Pip to be its keeper.

6 Children in Thornbury still whisper about Hollow Hill. But now, instead of dragons, they talk about a girl who was brave enough to follow a map, and a grandfather who was brave enough, in the end, to share his work.

3 Why didn't people believe Pip at first? How did she prove it?

4 How did the village change by the end?

How a Medieval Cathedral Was Built

An original informational text

1 Cathedrals were the largest buildings in medieval Europe. Some took more than a hundred years to finish, which meant that the workers who began a cathedral often did not live to see it completed.

2 First, a master builder drew the plans. He decided how tall the walls would be, where the windows would go, and how the roof would be supported. There were no computers, so he used simple tools like string, compasses, and rulers.

3 Next, workers dug deep trenches for the foundation. The foundation had to be strong enough to hold up thousands of tons of stone, so it was sometimes dug as deep as the walls were tall.

4 Then the stonecutters went to work. In the quarry, they cut huge blocks of stone and shaped them with hammers and chisels. Each block was marked with the stonecutter's own symbol so he could be paid for his work.

5 As the walls rose, carpenters built wooden scaffolds, frames that workers stood on to reach high places. Large wheels called treadwheels, powered by men walking inside them like hamsters, lifted the heavy stones into place.

6 Finally, glassmakers created stained-glass windows. They colored glass with metals, cut it into pieces, and joined the pieces with strips of lead to make pictures. When sunlight shone through, the inside of the cathedral glowed with color.

7 Today, many medieval cathedrals are still standing. They remind us what people could build with patience, teamwork, and simple tools.

3 List the steps of building a cathedral in order (at least five).

4 Explain how workers lifted heavy stones high into the walls. Use two details.

Beavers: Nature's Engineers

An original informational text

1 Beavers are some of the best builders in the animal world. They use their sharp front teeth to cut down trees, sometimes chewing through a trunk in a single night.

2 First, beavers build a dam across a stream. They pile up branches, rocks, and mud until the water backs up into a pond.

3 Next, they build a home called a lodge in the middle of the pond. The lodge has underwater entrances, so wolves and other predators cannot easily get in.

4 The pond a beaver makes helps other animals too. Fish, frogs, ducks, and insects move into the new wetland. In this way, one family of beavers can change a whole stream.

1. List the steps beavers follow to build their home, in order.

The Night of the Great Fire

An original informational text based on historical facts

1 In 1871, the city of Chicago was mostly made of wood. Houses, sidewalks, barns, and even some streets were wooden. That summer had been the driest anyone could remember. Only an inch of rain had fallen since July.

2 On the night of October 8, a fire started in a barn on the southwest side of the city. No one knows for sure how it began. Strong winds from the southwest pushed the flames toward the center of the city, and the fire spread from one wooden building to the next.

3 The city's firefighters worked all night, but they had only a few horse-drawn engines. The fire jumped across the Chicago River and kept going. Burning bits of wood flew through the air and started new fires blocks away.

4 Thousands of people ran from their homes carrying whatever they could. Some waded into Lake Michigan to escape the heat. When rain finally fell on the night of October 9, the fire had burned for more than a day.

5 The Great Chicago Fire destroyed about 17,000 buildings and left about 100,000 people homeless. Yet Chicago did not give up. People rebuilt the city, this time using more brick, stone, and iron. Within twenty years, Chicago was one of the largest and most modern cities in the country.

6 Today, a star on Chicago's flag stands for the Great Fire. It reminds people that the city rose from the ashes stronger than before.

1 Write the gist of paragraph 1.

2 Explain why the fire spread so quickly. Use evidence from two paragraphs.

3 What point of view is this text written in?

CLASSIC NOVEL EXCERPT

From Treasure Island, Chapter 1 (original 1883 text)

Robert Louis Stevenson, Treasure Island (1883). Public domain.

1 Squire Trelawney, Dr. Livesey, and the rest of these gentlemen having asked me to write down the whole particulars about Treasure Island, from the beginning to the end, keeping nothing back but the bearings of the island, and that only because there is still treasure not yet lifted, I take up my pen in the year of grace 17—, and go back to the time when my father kept the Admiral Benbow inn, and the brown old seaman, with the sabre cut, first took up his lodging under our roof.

2 I remember him as if it were yesterday, as he came plodding to the inn door, his sea-chest following behind him in a hand-barrow—a tall, strong, heavy, nut-brown man, his tarry pigtail falling over the shoulder of his soiled blue coat, his hands ragged and scarred, with black, broken nails, and the sabre cut across one cheek, a dirty, livid white.

3. Paragraph 2: list four details that describe the seaman. What kind of person does he seem to be?

An original scene inspired by Treasure Island

CHARACTERS: JIM, a boy who works at the inn · THE CAPTAIN, an old sailor · MOTHER, Jim's mother

(The Admiral Benbow inn. Night. Wind howls outside. THE CAPTAIN sits by the fire, gripping his mug.)

CAPTAIN: (in a low voice) Jim, come here, lad. You keep your weather-eye open, you hear?

JIM: For what, Captain?

CAPTAIN: For a seafaring man with one leg. If you see him, you tell me first. I'll pay you a silver fourpenny every month.

MOTHER: (entering with a tray) Jim! Stop bothering the guest and fetch more wood.

JIM: (to the audience) But I couldn't stop thinking about that one-legged man. That night, I dreamed of him chasing me across the moor.

INFORMATIONAL TEXT

Four Paragraphs About Life at Sea

Original informational paragraphs

1 The pirate Blackbeard began sailing around 1716. By 1717, he had captured a large French ship and renamed it Queen Anne's Revenge. In 1718, he blockaded the port of Charleston. Later that year, he was defeated in a battle off the coast of North Carolina.

2 Pirates and navy sailors both lived on ships and faced storms and disease. However, navy sailors worked for a government and were paid regular wages. Pirates, on the other hand, often voted for their captain and shared the treasure they stole.

3 Because sailors ate few fruits and vegetables on long voyages, many developed a disease called scurvy. As a result, their gums bled and they grew weak. When sailors began carrying limes and lemons, scurvy became much less common.

4 Ships often wrecked on rocky coasts at night. To solve this problem, people built lighthouses with bright lamps on high towers. The light warned sailors to steer away from danger.

INFORMATIONAL TEXT

Real Pirates of the Golden Age

An original informational text

1 From about 1690 to 1730, so many pirates sailed the oceans that historians call it the Golden Age of Piracy. Pirates attacked ships carrying gold, silver, sugar, and cloth.

2 Real pirates were very different from the pirates in stories. Most did not bury their treasure; they spent it quickly. There is little evidence that pirates made prisoners walk the plank. And treasure maps marked with an X were mostly invented by writers.

3 Pirate ships often had written rules. Crews voted on important decisions, and treasure was divided by shares. A captain who was unfair could be voted out.

4 Life as a pirate was dangerous and usually short. Many pirates were captured and punished. By 1730, navies had driven most pirates from the seas.

ADVENTURE STORY

Ghost Ship of the Fog

An original story

1 The fog rolled in thick and gray, swallowing the harbor whole. On the deck of the fishing boat Mary Bell, Captain Rosa squinted into the mist. Her crew had gone silent.

2 Then, out of the fog, a ship appeared. Its sails hung in rags, and its wooden sides were green with moss. No lanterns burned on its deck. No sailors called out. It drifted toward them without a sound.

3 "A ghost ship," whispered Tomás, the youngest sailor, gripping the rail so tightly his knuckles turned white. "My grandmother told me about them."

4 Captain Rosa's heart pounded, but her voice was steady. "Hard to starboard!" she ordered. The Mary Bell turned, and the old ship slid past, so close that Rosa could read the faded name on its stern: Restless.

5 The next day, Rosa learned the truth. The Restless was an old ship that had broken loose from its anchor in a storm. With no crew aboard, it had drifted for weeks. It wasn't haunted after all, though Tomás never quite believed that.

1. "The fog rolled in thick and gray, swallowing the harbor whole." What does "swallowing" mean here?

2. List two sensory details in paragraph 2 and the mood they create.

3 Explain two techniques the author uses to build suspense in paragraphs 1–3.

4 “Hard to starboard!” means turn the ship…

A left
B right
C around backward

ADVENTURE STORY

The Castaway of Pelican Key

An original story

1 The storm had wrecked the little supply boat, and when Eli woke, he was lying on warm sand with seaweed tangled in his hair. The boat was gone. The crew was gone. All he could see was a curve of white beach, a cluster of palm trees, and the endless blue ocean.

2 “Hello?” he called. Only the pelicans answered, squawking from the rocks.

3 For the first few days, Eli was too frightened to do anything but sit and stare at the horizon, hoping to see a sail. But his stomach growled, and his lips cracked from thirst. He knew that if he waited much longer, he would not survive.

4 So he made a plan. He followed the pelicans to a freshwater pool behind the rocks. He cracked coconuts with a heavy stone. He wove palm fronds into a roof and built a shelter against the cliff. Every morning, he scratched a line on a flat rock to count the days.

5 By the thirtieth line, Eli had become a different boy. His arms were brown and strong. He could catch fish with a sharpened stick and build a fire with dry grass and two stones. He even talked to the pelicans, naming the biggest one Captain.

6 Still, every evening, he climbed the cliff to watch the sea. And on the forty-second evening, he saw it: a white sail, tiny as a gull's feather, far out on the water.

7 Eli piled every branch he could find on the cliff top and lit the biggest fire he had ever made. Smoke climbed into the orange sky. The sail grew larger. It turned toward the island.

8 When the sailors rowed ashore, they found a tall, sunburned boy waiting on the beach with a pelican at his side. “We thought you were lost,” said the captain. Eli smiled. “I was,” he said. “But I found my way.”

Finding the Way: How Sailors Navigated

An original informational text

Lost at Sea

Today, ships use satellites to know exactly where they are. But for most of history, sailors crossed oceans with no land in sight and no GPS. How did they find their way? They used the sky, simple tools, and a great deal of skill.

Reading the Stars

In the Northern Hemisphere, sailors relied on the North Star, also called Polaris. Unlike other stars, it barely moves across the night sky. By measuring how high Polaris was above the horizon, a navigator could tell how far north the ship was. This measurement is called latitude.

The Compass

A compass has a magnetized needle that always points north. Chinese inventors were using compasses by around 1100, and the tool soon spread to sailors in Europe. With a compass, sailors could keep a steady direction even on cloudy nights when the stars were hidden.

Measuring Speed

To figure out how fast a ship was moving, sailors tossed a piece of wood tied to a long rope over the side. The rope had knots tied at equal distances. A sailor counted how many knots slipped through his hands while a small sand timer ran out. That is why a ship's speed is still measured in knots today.

Putting It Together

By combining direction, speed, and time, a navigator could estimate the ship's position on a map. This method, called dead reckoning, was not perfect. A strong current or a storm could push a ship far off course. That is why sailors on long voyages always watched for birds, floating plants, and changes in the color of the water, all signs that land might be near.

3 List the five headings. Under which heading would you find information about storms pushing ships off course?

INFORMATIONAL TEXT

Text A: The Iditarod

An original informational text

1 Every March, mushers and their sled dogs race about 1,000 miles across Alaska in the Iditarod. The trail crosses frozen rivers, mountains, and lonely tundra.

2 The race honors a famous trip in 1925. A sickness called diphtheria broke out in the town of Nome, and the medicine needed to stop it was hundreds of miles away. With no roads and planes unable to fly in the cold, teams of sled dogs carried the medicine in a relay. They made the trip in about five and a half days.

3 Today, mushers spend more than a week on the trail. They care for their dogs first, feeding them and checking their paws at every stop.

1. How long is the Iditarod?

2. Why did the 1925 trip happen? Explain with two details.

3. What is the main idea of Text A?

Part B · Text B (1 point each)

HISTORICAL FICTION

Text B: Balto's Run · A Story

An original story based on a real event

1 The wind howled across the ice, so cold it stung like needles. Gunnar Kaasen could barely see his own hands. “Balto, take us home,” he whispered to the lead dog.

2 Balto pressed his nose to the snow. Even in the whiteout, he found the trail. When the sled almost slid onto thin ice, Balto stopped short and refused to go on, then led the team around the danger.

3 At dawn, the team pulled into Nome. Kaasen fell to his knees beside Balto, pulling ice from the dog's paws. “You saved them,” he said. “You saved them all.”

OPINION WRITING

Should Fourth Graders Have Homework?

An original opinion piece

1 Many people argue about homework. I believe fourth graders should have a small amount of homework, about twenty minutes a night.

2 First, homework helps students practice. When students practice math facts or reading at home, they remember them better. A teacher at my school said her students' test scores rose after she assigned ten minutes of nightly reading.

3 Second, homework teaches responsibility. Students learn to plan their time and finish work without someone reminding them.

4 However, too much homework can be harmful. Children need time to play, rest, and be with their families. That is why twenty minutes is the right amount: enough to practice, but not so much that it takes over the evening.

INFORMATIONAL TEXT

Why Bees Matter

An original informational text

Tiny Workers, Big Job

Bees are much more than insects that buzz and sting. As they collect nectar, bees carry pollen from flower to flower. This process, called pollination, helps plants make fruits and seeds.

Food on Our Tables

Scientists estimate that about one out of every three bites of food we eat depends on pollinators such as bees. Apples, almonds, blueberries, and cucumbers all need pollination.

Bees in Trouble

In recent years, the number of honeybee colonies in some areas has dropped. Scientists point to several causes, including the loss of wildflowers, harmful chemicals, and diseases.

How You Can Help

People can help by planting flowers, avoiding chemicals that harm bees, and leaving some wild areas in their yards. Even a single pot of flowers on a balcony can feed bees.

1 What is pollination?

2 Under which heading would you find ways to help bees?

3 What evidence shows bees matter to people's food?

4 List two causes of the drop in honeybee colonies.

MYTH

Jason and the Golden Fleece · A Greek Myth Retold

An original retelling of a traditional Greek myth

1 Long ago in Greece, a young man named Jason learned that his uncle had stolen his father's throne. When Jason demanded it back, his uncle smiled slyly. “Bring me the Golden Fleece,” he said, “and the throne is yours.” The fleece hung in a faraway land, guarded by a dragon that never slept.

2 Jason built a great ship called the Argo and gathered the bravest heroes of Greece to sail with him. On the journey, they rowed past clashing rocks that smashed ships to splinters and faced storms and strange creatures.

3 In the land of the fleece, the king gave Jason impossible tasks, such as plowing a field with fire-breathing bulls. With the help of the king's daughter, Medea, who knew magic, Jason completed the tasks, put the dragon to sleep, and took the fleece.

4 Jason sailed home a hero. His quest had tested his courage, but he could not have succeeded alone.

FOLKTALE

Momotaro, the Peach Boy · A Japanese Folktale Retold

An original retelling of a traditional Japanese folktale

1 An old woman washing clothes in a river saw a giant peach floating by. She carried it home, and when she and her husband cut it open, out stepped a baby boy. They named him Momotaro, which means “Peach Boy,” and raised him with love.

2 When Momotaro grew up, ogres were stealing from the villages nearby. Momotaro decided to stop them. His mother packed him millet dumplings for the journey.

3 Along the way, he shared his dumplings with a hungry dog, a monkey, and a pheasant. Each one joined him. Together they crossed the sea to the ogres' island. The pheasant flew over the walls, the monkey opened the gate, and the dog and Momotaro charged in. The ogres surrendered and returned everything they had stolen.

4 Momotaro came home with the treasure and his loyal friends, and the villages were safe again.

MYTH

Persephone and the Seasons · A Greek Myth Retold

An original retelling of a traditional Greek myth

1 Demeter was the goddess of the harvest. Wherever she walked, crops grew tall and flowers bloomed. She loved nothing more than her daughter, Persephone.

2 One day Hades, ruler of the underworld, carried Persephone away to his dark kingdom. Demeter searched everywhere. In her grief, she stopped caring for the earth. Plants withered, snow fell, and people grew hungry.

3 At last, the king of the gods made an agreement. Persephone could return to her mother, but because she had eaten six pomegranate seeds in the underworld, she must spend six months of every year there.

4 And so, the ancient Greeks said, every year when Persephone goes below, Demeter mourns, and the earth grows cold and bare: autumn and winter. When Persephone returns, Demeter rejoices, and the earth blooms again: spring and summer.

SCIENCE TEXT

What Causes the Seasons?

An original informational text

1 Many people think seasons happen because Earth moves closer to and farther from the sun. That's not the reason. In fact, Earth is closest to the sun in early January, during winter in the Northern Hemisphere.

2 The real cause is Earth's tilt. Earth's axis, the imaginary line it spins around, is tilted about 23.5 degrees. As Earth travels around the sun during the year, the tilt stays pointed the same direction in space.

3 For part of the year, the Northern Hemisphere is tilted toward the sun. Sunlight hits it more directly, and days are longer, so it is summer. Six months later, the Northern Hemisphere is tilted away from the sun. Sunlight hits at a low angle, days are shorter, and it is winter.

Part A · Text A (1 point each)

MYTH

Text A: Vulcan's Forge · A Roman Myth Retold

An original retelling of a traditional Roman myth

1 The ancient Romans told of Vulcan, the god of fire and metalworking. Deep beneath a mountain, Vulcan kept his forge, where he hammered out armor and thunderbolts for the gods.

2 When Vulcan worked hard, smoke and sparks poured from the top of the mountain, and the ground shook with the pounding of his hammer. Sometimes, when he was angry, melted rock spilled down the mountainside.

3 Our word volcano comes from Vulcan's name.

1. What does the myth say causes smoke and sparks from the mountain?

2. What does the myth say causes melted rock to spill out?

3. What word comes from Vulcan's name?

Part B · Text B (1 point each)

SCIENCE TEXT

Text B: How Volcanoes Form

An original science text

1 Deep under Earth's surface, it is so hot that some rock melts into a thick liquid called magma. Magma is lighter than the solid rock around it, so it slowly rises.

2 When magma collects under the surface, pressure builds, like the pressure in a shaken soda bottle. If the pressure becomes great enough, magma bursts out through an opening. Once it reaches the surface, it is called lava.

3 Eruptions can send out ash, gas, and rock. Before many eruptions, the ground shakes with small earthquakes as magma moves underground. Scientists watch for these signs to warn people living nearby.

4 What is the difference between magma and lava?

5 Explain the soda-bottle comparison.

6 Why do scientists watch for small earthquakes?

Part C · Compare and integrate (1 point each)

7 Both texts mention the ground shaking. How does each explain it?

8 Which text's main purpose is to inform with evidence?

A Text A
B Text B

9 What do the ancient Romans' myth and modern science both notice about volcanoes?

Part D · Synthesis writing (5 points)

10 Write a paragraph comparing how the two texts explain volcanoes. Include a topic sentence, evidence from both texts with citations, comparison and contrast transitions, and a concluding sentence about why both texts are valuable.

The Last Lantern

An original story

1 Every night for sixty years, Grandmother Rosa lit a lantern in her window. The village children believed it was magic. Some said it kept wolves away; others said it called home lost sailors.

2 When Rosa grew too weak to climb the stairs, her grandson Mateo found her staring at the dark window. “Who will light it now?” she whispered.

3 Mateo had always thought the lantern was silly. But that night, he climbed the stairs, struck a match, and lit the wick. The flame trembled, then glowed steady and gold.

4 The next morning, a fisherman knocked at the door. “Last night the fog was so thick I lost my way,” he said. “Then I saw your light. I steered toward it and found the harbor.”

5 Mateo looked at his grandmother. She smiled. “It was never magic,” she said. “It was just someone remembering to care.” From then on, Mateo lit the lantern every night.

3 In paragraph 1, the children “believed it was magic.” What does the word “believed” suggest?

A They knew for certain.
B They thought so without proof.
C They were told the truth.

Coral Reefs: Cities Under the Sea

An original informational text

Tiny Builders

A coral reef may look like a colorful rock, but it is built by millions of tiny animals called coral polyps. Each polyp makes a hard shell of limestone around its soft body. Over thousands of years, these shells pile up to form reefs.

A Busy Neighborhood

Reefs cover less than one percent of the ocean floor, yet about one quarter of all ocean species live on or near them. Fish, sea turtles, octopuses, and sharks find food and shelter among the coral.

Reefs in Danger

When ocean water becomes too warm, corals push out the tiny algae that live inside them and give them color and food. The coral turns white, which is called coral bleaching. If the water stays warm too long, the coral can die.

Protecting Reefs

Scientists are growing young corals in underwater nurseries and replanting them on damaged reefs. Visitors can help by never touching or standing on coral and by using sunscreen that is safe for reefs.

3 Why are reefs called “cities under the sea”? Use evidence.

4 Explain the cause and effect of coral bleaching.

The Clockmaker's Apprentice

An original story

1 Old Master Brenner was the finest clockmaker in the city. His shop was crowded with clocks of every size: tall clocks in wooden cases, tiny clocks set in silver lockets, and one enormous clock in the window with a painted moon that rose and set each night.

2 When eleven-year-old Hana became his apprentice, she was so eager that she worked too quickly. Gears slipped from her tweezers. Springs flew across the room. Once she even dropped a pocket watch into a bowl of soup.

3 “Patience,” Master Brenner said, gently fishing the watch from the soup. “A clock cannot be rushed. Neither can a clockmaker.”

4 Hana frowned. She wanted to build something wonderful, not sweep up springs. But she tried to slow down. She learned to breathe before she lifted a gear and to check each tiny screw twice.

5 One winter night, the great clock in the window stopped. The moon froze halfway across its painted sky. Master Brenner was sick in bed, and the city's New Year celebration would begin at midnight, when everyone gathered to watch the moon clock strike twelve.

6 Hana opened the clock's case. Inside were hundreds of gears. Her heart raced, but she remembered: Patience. Slowly, carefully, she found the problem, a single bent tooth on one small gear. She straightened it with her tweezers, held her breath, and gave the pendulum a gentle push.

7 Tick. Tock. The painted moon began to move.

8 At midnight, the great clock struck twelve as the crowd cheered. Master Brenner, wrapped in a blanket at his window, smiled. Hana was no longer just an apprentice. She was a clockmaker.

1. Describe the setting in paragraph 1. Use two details.

2. What problem does Hana have at the beginning? Give evidence.

3. What does Master Brenner mean by “A clock cannot be rushed. Neither can a clockmaker”?

4. What is the climax of the story?

5. How does Hana change? Use evidence from the beginning and the end.

6. State the theme.

7. “The moon froze halfway across its painted sky” means…

A the moon turned to ice
B the painted moon stopped moving
C it was cold outside

INFORMATIONAL TEXT

How Clocks Changed the World

An original informational text

Before Clocks

For thousands of years, people told time by the sun. Sundials used a shadow to show the hour, but they did not work on cloudy days or at night. Water clocks and candles marked with lines helped, but none were very exact.

Gears and Pendulums

The first mechanical clocks appeared in Europe around 1300. They used gears and falling weights. In 1656, a Dutch scientist named Christiaan Huygens built a clock with a pendulum, a weight that swings back and forth at a steady rate. Pendulum clocks were far more accurate than earlier clocks.

Time for Everyone

Accurate clocks changed daily life. Factories could set work hours, and trains could run on schedules. In fact, train travel led many countries to create standard time zones in the 1880s so that schedules made sense from city to city.

8 List two problems with telling time before mechanical clocks.

9 What is a pendulum, and why did it matter?

10 Which structure does the section “Time for Everyone” mostly use?

A cause and effect
B compare and contrast
C problem and solution

11 What is the main idea of the whole text?

Part C · Connect the texts (1 point each)

12 What kind of clock does Hana fix? Use Text B to explain how it works.

13 Why might a whole city care so much about one clock (Text A)? Use Text B for support.

Part D · Language (1 point each)

14 enormous (paragraph 1) means...

15 Plural of watch

16 Edit: hana said im ready

17 Combine: Hana was careful. Hana was brave.

Part E · Writing (6 points)

18 Opinion: Is patience the most important quality for an apprentice? Write a paragraph with a clear opinion, two reasons with evidence from the texts, linking words, and a conclusion.
